

REVOLUTION STILL ALARMS OFFICIALS

REBELS CONTINUE TO HOLD SEVERAL IMPORTANT POSITIONS.

WATCH THE SITUATION

Authorities at Washington Are Closely Watching the Crisis Which is Approaching.

Washington, Aug. 31.—While more American forces are now beginning to arrive and others are on the way the state department is worried over the safety of foreigners beyond the line of communication already established. Particularly it is concerned for those at Matagalpa.

Rear Admiral Sutherland's reinforcements are doing their best to hurry the repair of the railway and telegraph lines. More definite advice from Minister Weitzel regarding the capture of ammunition by the government forces added a great deal to the importance of the affair. It appears that convoys had been dispatched from Canada by the rebel forces at Leon, the second largest city in Nicaragua and on the railroad from Managua to Corinto. The government forces attacked this convoy near El Cuayabal and captured 80,000 rounds of rapid fire cartridges. As the government had been a little short of ammunition this was a valuable acquisition and the rebels were seriously weakened because they had no means of replenishing their supplies. Minister Weitzel expresses the belief the capture has probably lessened the danger of Gen. Mena's second attack on Managua. The Salvadorean minister at Managua who has been interned by the rebels at Leon for a few days declares that Gen. Bac and other revolutionary leaders practically have no control over the mob which pillaged many stores and houses and destroyed much property.

Minister Wittichell at Managua still has difficulty in getting his dispatches through to the state department. A message from Minister Wittichell dated August 28, delayed in transmission repeated previous statements that the condition in Nicaragua bordered on anarchy. The federal troops under the command of Gen. Huerta have been retarded in their progress to Juarez which have washed out the railroad tracks and destroyed the telegraph.

ELGIN RACERS GO AT DANGEROUS SPEED

Second Day of the Big Event is Off With Several Bad Accidents.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 31.—Twelve cars were expected to start in the two races on this the second day of the annual Elgin meet. Of these eight were scheduled to go 306 miles around the eight and a quarter mile road course for the big event of the day, the $2,500 free-for-all.

Starter Wagner sent off Ralph Mulford, the first to start in today's two races, at 11:10. The others in the field were sent away at 30 second intervals. The field had been reduced to a total of ten by the withdrawal of a National and a Fiat. E. Burdell, driving a Benz car was favorite in the betting on the Elgin national trophy race. The Fiat entry driven by Eddie Hearne was a top-heavy favorite in the free-for-all contest.

Clark, driving a Mercedes, ran into a fence near Hornbeck's turn in the sixth lap and wrecked his car, putting him out of the race. Neither Clark nor his mechanic was dangerously injured, the patrol judges reported.

The 120 h. p. Fiat entered in the free-for-all race was disabled during a try-out this morning. The National entry, to have been driven by Neil Whalen, also was put out of the race before the start by mechanical troubles.

Elgin Bulletin, 4 p. m.: Ralph De Palma won the Elgin race at 254 miles from field, 3 hours 3 minutes 25 seconds. Ralph Mulford was second.

ASK CONTRIBUTIONS OF NATIONAL BANKS

Report That Progressive Party Has Been Seeking Such Aid Reaches Treasury Department

Washington, Aug. 31.—Reports that one of the political parties is soliciting contributions from national banks for the political campaign pending, stirred treasury department officials today. Any national bank making such contributions, declared Thomas P. Kane acting comptroller of the currency, whose attention has been called to the reports will be subjected to fine and its responsible officers and directors liable to fine and imprisonment for violating the law. The Washington Post today published a report that E. H. Hooker, national treasurer of the progressive party in a personal letter to the president of a local national bank with a capital and surplus of nearly one million had solicited a contribution of $25,000.

E. H. Hooker, national treasurer of the progressive party said this afternoon, he had perhaps sent letters to a thousand bankers soliciting aid for the progressive cause. "But I addressed them as individuals," he explained. "In no case has a letter been sent to a corporation or to any one as a corporation. If the address happened to be in care of a bank the letters may have been sent so marked, but it is ridiculous to say we have solicited from any banks or corporation as such."

W. railway company to cease collecting switching charges from the Southern Wisconsin Sand and Gravel Company and Fisher Company, of Janesville, on cars of sand and gravel switched from the latter's side tracks to the main line for shipment where the revenue of the railroad company from the haul of such cars equals or exceeds $15 per car. The road has exacted $2 per car in violation it is claimed of an agreement to do such switching free. The refund matter was held in abeyance by the commission.

MAKE PLEA FOR SIMPLICITY IN CHARGES OF JUDGES

Milwaukee, Aug. 31.—A plea for simplicity in the instructions of a judge to the jury was made today before the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology by Charles A. De Courcy of Boston who favored the use by the judge of words almost bordering on what is known as the "language of the street" the "long winded" present instructions replete with compound legal phrases only tends to confuse the average jury man he contended whereas a brief and simple charge in such language as "I want you guys to get busy now and figure out if this defendant" would make the meaning more plain. That homicides should be tried immediately after the time is committed was the argument of Judge S. H. Russell of Arkansas, Okla., speaking on the question of procedure in criminal cases. If Judge Russell has the dictation of how such trials would be run he would do away with "extenuating circumstances," the "unwritten law," "brainstorm," dementia americana or any other of the popular excuses for shedding blood. The only excuse for murder he contended is self defense.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Boston, Mass., Aug. 31.—Interest in the investigation into the alleged "planting of dynamite during the big textile mills strike at Lawrence was renewed today by the report that the indicting of W. RECEPTION PLEAS BULL MOOSE CHIEF

Vermont Crowds Delight Colonel Who Anticipates a Strenuous Stumping Tour.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] St. Johnsbury, Vt., Aug. 31.—"If the crowd turns out on the remainder of my stumping trip as they have in Vermont, I don't know how I will live through it," said Colonel Roosevelt, as he started out on the last day of his campaign in this state prior to his state election next Tuesday. "I don't need to keep my hat in the ring now," he said. "There are too many bandanas in it."

Colonel Roosevelt was up at 6:30 this morning for his day's work and before eight o'clock was in his auto headed for Barre where he is to make his first speech. Randolph, Deliso Falls and Brattleboro, will complete the day's itinerary. From Brattleboro he will return to Oyster Bay for a brief rest before departing for the West on Monday morning.

An appeal for support of the progressive state ticket was made here today by Colonel Roosevelt. He said he had learned that many persons who intended to vote for him in November would vote the republican ticket in the state election next Tuesday. The colonel protested against this policy and urged all of his adherents to stand by the state ticket.

Colonel Roosevelt said after he had finished his speech that it had been charged he had come to Vermont merely in quest of votes for himself in the November election. "With this fight on in Vermont, should have come here anyway," he said. "I wanted to make it clear that I had come here just as much for the state as the national ticket."

Speaking of his attitude on Senator Penrose and John D. Archbold, Colonel Roosevelt said, "These men think there must be something crooked about me. They can't understand that there isn't and they keep hoping to get something which will discredit me."

"Somebody is always making charges against me and I always deny them and produce a letter to prove they are false."

At Randolph, Randolph, Vt., Aug. 31.—A large crowd heard Colonel Roosevelt's speech in Randolph soon after he arrived here from Barre at noon. The colonel renewed his attack on Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and declared his belief that the progressive party would win its fight. "We are going to win," he said. "We are going to win." "I want Vermont to lead in the fight, but we are going to win anyway."

VOTE ON ADOPTING NEW CONSTITUTION FOR OHIO TUESDAY

Forty-Two Important Amendments to Be Passed Upon—Ballot Yard Long—Great Interest in Outcome.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Columbus, O., Aug. 31.—Intense interest is manifested throughout the state in the outcome of the special election to be held next Tuesday when the voters of the commonwealth will be given an opportunity to decide the fate of the forty-two important amendments to the state constitution provisionally adopted by the recent constitutional convention. Although personal interests and party politics are not paramount in the coming election as they are in regular elections at which candidates for various public offices are voted for, the campaign, now practically ended, was unusually spirited. Some of the amendments, although quite important from a juridical point of view, did not evoke any material controversy, while others, like the woman's suffrage amendment, the license question and the propositions in regard to the initiative and referendum were made the subjects of lively controversies.

Under the provisions of the law only registered voters will be entitled to vote at the election on Tuesday next. This will probably reduce the number of votes that will be cast, but will not materially affect the result of the election. This is due to the fact that the law governing the coming election was framed with a view of making it easier to change the constitution. At former constitutional elections it was necessary for a majority of all the voters taking part in the election to vote in favor of an amendment to secure its adoption; at the coming election, however, an amendment will be considered adopted if a majority of the voters voting on it should vote in its favor.

The ballots to be used in the coming election are one yard long and ten inches wide. One column contains the list of forty-one of the amendments to be voted on, while the proposition regarding the liquor license occupies a place by itself in the second column. There will be no "straight" ballots. Every proposal stands on its own merits and must be voted for or against by placing an X in the space designated for it. The work of counting the votes will be quite difficult and complicated and will occupy considerable time.

If all the amendments proposed should be adopted by the vote of the people, Ohio would obtain a practical new constitution, embodying some of the most radical and progressive ideas advocated by political reformers in any part of the country. Among the most important features proposed are the following:

Legislation may be secured and the constitution amended by the initiative and referendum.

Five of the six supreme court judges must concur to set aside a law as unconstitutional.

Women are given the right to vote. All candidates for state offices are to be nominated by primary. United States senators are to be nominated by the people and a presidential preference vote is to be taken.

All appointive state positions are put under civil service rules. The Legislature is authorized to remove any state officers, including judges, upon complaint and hearing, for misconduct in office involving moral turpitude.

The Legislature is authorized to regulate the issue and sale of corporation stock.

The Legislature is authorized to regulate billboard advertising.

The Torrens system of land transfer is to be adopted.

Appeal litigation is to be restricted, except in felony cases there may be but one trial and one review. Jurors need not agree unanimously in civil suits.

Capital punishment is to be abolished.

Cities and villages are given the right to frame their own charters, own and regulate their own public utilities and to adopt by ordinance such local police, sanitary and other similar regulations, not in conflict with general laws, as they may deem necessary.

Prison contract labor is to be abolished.

The Legislature is authorized to pass laws for the welfare and protection of employees and for the compensation of workers for injuries received.

Amid the scare the soldier escaped and fled into the forest where he is still at large and armed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Aug. 31.—Failing in an attempt to delay the trial of Police Lieut. Chas. Becker, for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, counsel for the accused, will ask that Becker be tried in another county. McIntyre, chief counsel for the police, said today that "in view of the present turmoil and prejudice which has resulted against my client," if he was unable to get delay he would seek to obtain a change in venue.

Just what action the district attorney will follow in the case of Becker has not been known, but a statement was made today by one of his attorneys that, "As the case now stands, there is sufficient evidence to convict Becker." Conspiracy will be the defense of Becker. "My associates and myself feel that we will be able to reveal at the trial evidence regarding this upon which the state is now relying outwitting the plot and conspiracy formulated by Times Outs in the seventh century."

Up to the present time all railroads have been in the habit of using foreign equipment to any part of the country, providing it was returned to the company within a reasonable length of time. Under this method the smaller lines have had the use of more cars than they actually owned, while the larger roads which owned the equipment have experienced a car shortage, their appeals for the return of their property often goes unheeded. The new rules provide that all the foreign equipment must be returned to the owners from the point of destination, and not used by the railroad in whose territory the equipment happens to be to haul freight to points far away. Severe penalties are to be imposed on the companies violating the agreement.

Heralding The New Things For Fall Wear

YOU know that for years this little store has been a big factor in furnishing the best goods obtainable each year.

One idea has dominated this business from the first day until now; the idea that the men of this town want and will support generously a store which makes a feature of very high grade goods.

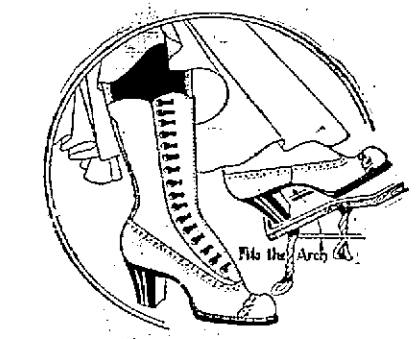

At first we had only our own convictions to go on; we felt we were right in our estimate of our public but we also felt that we were taking a chance. We dared to back our judgment.

We have made a store such as this town has not seen before; such as has no counterpart here. You'll find what you want here.

Men's Hats

WE ought to sell you your hats; and if you knew what our qualities really are, we'd do it. Here's a $3 hat, Luby Special, made in all good styles, that's a wonder for value. Others at higher prices. A cap from us means the only one of its kind in town, $1 upwards.

D. W. WATT Tells Bit of INSIDE CIRCUS LIFE of Annie Oakley

You outsiders of the circus life know but little what really goes on behind the canvas screen that separates the great show arena from the entertainers' quarters. Doubtless your ideas of the life of those strange "nomadic" people are sadly clouded and believe all is gay and happy. You do not know of the many little tragedies, the many little kindnesses, the big heartedness of the men, and women who travel from town to town to amuse the public.

In my articles I have tried to bring you in touch with some of the real every day life of the circus people. Have tried to tell you something that the press agents of the big shows forget to write about. During my years with the "white tops" I made many friends and acquaintances, travelled through many states and had many peculiar happenings. These I am recounting for your knowledge.

In the early '80's Kansas City was known as the "City of Hills." Several of their business streets were as steep as a half a mile in length. It was impossible to make parade in Kansas City without using what we called the iron shoe. That was a shoe which fastened on the hind wheel of all the heavy wagons and was held there with a strong chain.

Mr. Forepaugh for many years had sixteen colored horses which were always driven on the big band chariot. At the top of one of these long hills in the business district they had adjusted the big shoe and had only got barely started down the hill when the chain broke and the heavy chariot with twenty-six musicians in it rushed onto the horses and they all started on a run.

The driver knew it would be fatal to keep them straggled ahead on such a long steep hill so he turned them at the first street and on the corner of the side street was a round, glass fronted drug store. The driver was in the wagon right side up, but in this he failed. The wagon went over directly in front of the drug store and about half the musicians with their horns went through the big glass front and landed in the drug store. Four or five of the horses got tangled up and fell and several of the musicians were badly cut by the glass and four of them had to be taken to the hospital.

Word was sent to the show grounds to Mr. Forepaugh and he told me to take his horse and carriage and plenty of money with me and not to come back until I settled everything in full; that they would there look after the starting of the show for in case of damage of this kind Mr. Forepaugh always wanted a quick settlement.

I was on the ground in a few minutes and I found the druggist to be one of the finest men I ever met, and in less than an hour's time I had settled with him in full; and for several hundred dollars less than it might have cost had he not been ready to do everything that was right. He said it was purely an accident with no one to blame and all he wanted was enough to replace his front and lost goods.

I paid him $650 and sent four of the musicians to a hospital and about two weeks later they joined the show again. But after that if there was a steep hill anywhere in the line of parade you would always find twenty-six German musicians walking to the foot of the hill. No more chances of that kind for them.

But Kansas City was always one of the banner towns of the west and after all the expense that day the show left with several hundred dollars to the good.

This same year while on our way west we were billed to show in Waterloo, Iowa, on Saturday. My mother and oldest sister lived at Hampton only about 30 miles west of Waterloo. I sent word for them to come to the show as I had not seen them in several years. They were Methodists of the old school and never had seen a circus, but came on as mother said only to visit me. Everybody around the show knew they were coming and there was an elegant dinner served in the officer's cook tent in their honor and some of the best seats in the show were reserved for them and their friends. Every attention possible was shown them and when they left for home in the evening mother said to me, "I don't blame you for being with the circus. They are the nicest people that I have ever met."

We had a Sunday run from there to Albert Lea, Minnesota. About 11 o'clock that night while visiting with the railroad agent he told me I could get a train in about half an hour for Hampton where my mother and sister lived and at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon could get a train for Albert Lea so that I could spend nearly all Sunday at home. I took his word for it, took the train for Hampton and arrived there about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. I went to see about my train for Albert Lea and they told me there was no train for Albert Lea until 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. No one at the show knew where I was so I telegraphed that I was stranded and could not get there till Monday afternoon. They broke the locks on my ticket boxes and a new man sold the tickets for the afternoon house. And for ever after that I was sure of my connections.

Last Thursday evening my wife and I took a street car early in the evening and went down to see the Young Buffalo Wild West and Col. Cummins Far East show and to have a visit with some of the people that we might know.

At the main entrance stood William Butler the husband of Annie Oakley, the great rifle shot. Mr. Butler gave us a warm welcome and invited us back to his wife's private tent for a visit with the little woman who has been famous the world over for many years as the greatest lady rifle shot in the world. Just after leaving the front door some one of the bosses in the show called to Mr. Butler and he excused himself and my wife and I went on to the south of the big pavilion. Here we found a small tent about 15 feet square with the lops all down, but a bright light inside. My friend called out, "Hello Mrs. Butler," and a sweet feminine voice from the inside answered, "In just a second," and almost at the same time she drew back the lops of the tent and greeted us and we were soon seated in easy chairs and with a smile on her face she said, "Well, Dave what do you want to know?"

"Well," I said, "I shan't ask you your age, nor as to whether you are a suffragette or not, but in short I would like the history of your life in about twelve lines."

"Well," she said, "You are not asking much, for you certainly have known something of my life for years back. Of course you know," she said, "That for 17 consecutive years I was one of the features of the great Buffalo Bill show, both in this country and in Europe. During my life in the business we have travelled in fourteen different countries, principally with Buffalo Bill. But for a few years Mr. Butler featured me through Europe and for one year we were on contract in Russia for a season at $7,500 per week and expenses and Mr. Butler and I have always said that we lost money in Russia. We were under no expense and saved all our salary practically, but such a country to travel in. Never again."

"Well, as for the money that I have made and I will tell you. Mr. Butler and myself never cared much for fine clothes or jewels and while I have a good many jewels I seldom wear them and as for the most part they were given me in different countries all over the world."

She turned to my wife and said, "Mrs. Watt, it is seldom that I have ever worn a dress costing over $45 or $50. My hobby has been for many years to do good to some extent to other people. Many years ago I commenced to pick up poor children in the great cities and educate them and put them in a way to earn a good living in an honorable way for themselves. I had a letter in Chicago last week from one of my last wards from Philadelphia saying that she had finished school and had a nice position at $12 a week. Since I commenced this work I have educated and found good positions for 18 boys and girls."

And she said, "the wonderful part of this is every one of them have made good. And this means more to me than fine clothes or costly jewels."

"Mr. Butler and I own a bungalow home in the suburbs of Newark, New Jersey and the corner of the block we live in is said to be just 13 miles from the court house in New York City. And there it is after we retire from the business that we expect to spend the balance of our days."

While Annie Oakley has not enjoyed any great college with millions nor had her name carved over the entrance of a great library, yet in her work she has done as much as any of these. For every dollar that she has used in her work for the betterment of mankind she has earned it at by hard work and from almost every civilized country in the world. Give us more Annie Oakleys and the world will be better. Don't you think?

Harry Wolter, the New York Yankee outfielder, who broke one of his legs last spring, has discarded his crutches, but will not try to play ball again this year.

A movement is on foot to abolish the hammer throw in athletics. The event has been marked as dangerous because fatalities have resulted from it. Among those who are opposed to the hammer throw is Trainer Keene Kitzpatrick of Princeton. "I am very much in favor of substituting the thirty-five pound weight for the hammer," he said recently, "for a weight that can be thrown over thirty feet is dangerous to competitors and officials."

Helen Zimmerman, of the Chicago Cubs, whose awful slugging has made his name a household word in fandom, hasn't as intimate a knowledge of baseball as he has of baseball.

Zim was riding back from one of the spring training games in Indianapolis last spring. Thicker, who had just become the proud possessor of an automobile, called attention to the considerable number of cars of another make which they had met. "I don't believe I ever saw so many Marmons in one day before," said Joe.

"I didn't know Indianapolis was in Utah," cut in Zimmerman.

"Aw, get wise, wet wise; we ain't within a thousand miles of Utah," chorused the Cubs.

"Don't get fresh with me, I ain't so long ago the all the Marmons were supposed to stick in Utah and nobody asked me when they changed the law."

As the season in the Western league draws toward its close, the race looks to be Denver's, the winner of last year's pennant. Omaha and St. Joseph are battling for second place honors and it is difficult now to tell which will get the prize.

Commencing October first, the salary of carriers of rural mail will be raised in all parts of the country where rural free delivery service is in operation, as the result of one of the provisions of the post office appropriation bill. The bill recently passed by Congress, sets the maximum amount which carriers may receive for their services at $1100, an increase of one hundred dollars over what they formerly received. All of the rural carriers in this city will benefit by this increase in salary. The raise, it is said, was secured in Congress through the efforts of the rural carriers' national association, which has been working for legislation to better conditions for rural delivery men.

CLERKS OF ELECTION DEMAND NO INCREASE

Have Not Yet Followed Example of Beloit Election Clerks Who Ask For More Pay.

Members of the City Council stated this morning that the members of the election board have as yet made no demand for increased compensation for their services on primary day, as has been done by the Beloit election clerks. The Beloit clerks base their demand on the additional work that will be required of them because of the second choice feature. Inspectors there have hitherto received $5 a day and they now demand $10. They state the count will take twenty-four hours and will go before the Beloit common council Monday night and ask for increased compensation.

FIRST REAL TEST OF LAW PROVES MOST EMBARRASSING

Candidates Do Not Know Quite How to Figure Out the Primary Day Without Poll Workers.

Candidates for state and county offices are much at sea over just what will constitute the infringement of the law relative to workers at the polls on Tuesday next. Under the law no candidate can utilize a rig or any hired workers so it is to be presumed all men, not candidates, who solicit all men, are working for the love of excitement. Should it be found they were not, they would be subject to a fine as well as the candidate, under the new corrupt practice law.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Religions are not religion. Religion is universal. The man who is not religious is not normal, and by this use of the word "religion," I do not mean saying your prayers and reading your Bible and going to church, or professing any of the rites and ceremonies of any of the cults in any of the lands. By religion I mean that force in human nature which has inspired man's belief in something for him beyond the grave, and in something for him in this world greater and more triumphant than he could expect from his apparent weakness and from his many limitations.

Religion made the Bible. Religion, exactly the same force, made Mohammedanism, Buddhism and Confucianism; exactly the same produced the witch-doctor and drives the African pagan into the jungle to hide from evil spirits. Religion causes the Hindu mother to throw her child to the crocodiles, and the Christian mother to teach her boy the Lord's prayer. "Side-issues and formalities" are defects in human nature, but the best thing about Mr. Edison, or any other human being, is, in the words of Paul Sabatier, that he is "incurably religious."

Religion is the capacity for the highest relationship, conscientiously chosen as such. Whatever a man puts at the top is his religion. When he reaches his supreme possibilities religiously, he becomes unselfish, or, as in the case of Jesus, he loses himself for the sake of others.—Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., Pastor of Plymouth Church, in March Columbian.

This broad and intelligent definition of religion will be helpful to many people who have come to believe, through the narrow environment of some creed, that the church represents all there is of religious faith.

The day is rapidly approaching when Mr. Hillis' thought on what religion really is, will be generally accepted, and when our missionaries will be sent to benighted lands, not to teach the people how to die, but how to live.

The religions of the old world have stood the test of centuries. Generations have come and gone, satisfied with the faith of the fathers, and ever loyal to it.

It was said of the Japanese army, during the Jap. and Russian war, that it was an irresistible force because every soldier was a religious zealot, and considered it a great honor to die in defense of his faith.

The Japs, however, are a very ob-servant people, and they have discovered that the Christian religion possesses a higher standard of morality than they enjoy, and so the president of the Manchurian railroad said to Mr. Hibbard, who is engaged in Y. M. C. A. work in Japan:

"Come over to Manchuria and we'll help you put up a building, and put you in charge of our boys, for we are not satisfied with their morals. We are satisfied with our religion to die by, but we believe that yours teaches a cleaner and better morality."

Mr. Hibbard—who, by the way, married a Janesville girl—has had charge of the work for the past two years, and at many stations along the road for six hundred miles, the employees are organized and are being trained along the lines of moral betterment, without attempting to disturb their religious faith. That's practical missionary work which might well be adopted in other lands.

Many of the old religions are filled with superstition, but all of them demand sacrifice which is ever an expression of love and loyalty. A recent writer relates the following incident, showing a feature of Chinese service:

"Once every year, during the first fifteen days of the seventh Chinese month, the curious ceremony of Yü-Nan-Wheel is celebrated, being, in fact, the paying of homage to the land and sea devils. Seven priests carry out the ceremony by offering up various forms of prayer and making an unearthly noise by beating gongs. Any one wishing to show his respect to the devils can do so by a payment of six hundred cash—about twenty-two cents—to each of the priests, for which amount they will continue their performance for twelve hours—a truly modest remuneration for gentlemen engaged in the arduous occupation of propitiating evil spirits.

"For an extra payment of two thousand cash a number of small red paper boats about six inches long, with lights inside, will be sent floating down the river with the current. These lights are for the benefit of the sea devils, in order that they may be able to see their way about on dark nights—a little attention which it is to be hoped these maritime demons appreciate.

"Having finished this performance, the person on whose behalf it has been carried out goes away happy in the conviction that he will not lose any of his family throughout the year either by sickness or drowning, so that the whole ceremony may be looked upon as an insurance policy. At this time of year many thousands of the small lighted boats may be seen floating down the Yangtze-kings, presenting a most unusual spectacle."

This old Chinese custom is a relic of religious superstition, but more pleasing than burning the witches, back in the old New England days. And no more grotesque than the custom which prevails today, in some of our cemeteries, where volleys are fired at daybreak to drive away the evil spirits.

The religions of the world are so numerous and so elastic that they adapt themselves to all classes and conditions of humanity. And while the most zealous worshippers of creeds and dogmas, are found in the most benighted lands, there is no lack of bigotry and narrowness in this and other so-called Christian nations.

An effort was recently made to unite three strong protestant denominations in Canada. The clergy agreed on a plan and worked to bring it about, but when submitted to the people, they promptly voted it down.

This is not surprising for there is nothing quite so narrow as a small brain attached to a church creed. In a little town not many miles away, two weak churches are struggling for existence. They tried, not long ago, to unite, and failed. There are thousands of inland towns, which had their growth years ago, where from three to half a dozen churches compete for meagre existence, but a suggestion of union is like waving a red rag at a bull. Why? Because the people are so religious, and so absorbed in a creed that they sacrifice common sense.

The "great outside world," which "Billy" Sunday and men of his class condemn to perdition and everlasting punishment, represents a large constituency, composed of men and women who came into being, in this and every other land, endowed with a choice heritage known as the "Kingdom of God within us."

We call it, in this Christian land, "the conscience," the voice which constantly says, "do right"—the voice that was born with the race and has stayed with it while the centuries have come and gone.

What the right is, is not a question of conscience, but of judgment, developed and influenced by environment. That is why the standard of right and wrong is so flexible. Millions of people died before the date of the Christian era, but they were not destitute of a conscience or of a religion which satisfied them.

The hope of immortality is also as old as the race, and it has ever been an inspiration to humanity. The spirit of sacrifice, which the heathen nations possess in rare degree, is prompted by this hope, and the voice of conscience spurs to service. The whole performance is grotesque, and many of the customs may seem cruel from our viewpoint, but they are expressions of religious zeal on the part of people who are doing the best they know.

The religion which accomplishes the most for humanity was exemplified by the Master, who "went about doing good." So simple that people of every race may adopt it, with or without a creed, and so effective that it is recognized as the highest order of service.

"What we do for this generation must be done now," is the slogan of the religious forward movement. We can all afford to adopt it.

SENTIMENT OF FARMERS.

Twenty-five hundred members of the Walworth County Farmers' Protective association, today were notified by their president and secretary that after June 1, 1913, they would be compelled to test cattle and deliver them for slaughter, such as react from the tuberculosis, without being paid for it. This is the same bill that L. B. Gottle took such pride in giving as one of the reasons that the farmers should vote for him, because he supported it. The statement of the association officers also recommends that all members vote for L. C. Whitte for the nomination for the state senate on the grounds that he favors the repeal of this law as an imposition on cattle owners. What is true of Walworth county is true of Rock. Have the cattle owners looked into this law that Mr. Gottle takes such pride in recommending and which he says he favored and which Mr. Whitte would repeal? If so, have you decided to vote for or against your interests? A vote for Whitte is favorable to your interests. Remember that on primary day and vote accordingly.

The platitudes of the income tax law discussion do not reach the average person. Perhaps they do not have a "statesmanlike understanding" of the requirements of the law, but the fact is it is going to hit the pocketbook of the average taxpayer, has already frightened industrial concerns to curtail expenses, should be reason enough for voting against a man who states that but twenty-nine farmers in the county will be affected by the law, when the county clerk refuses to give out any figures and says that anything stated in this line must be guess work.

The Milton and Milton Junction papers have endorsed Mr. North of Edgerton as their choice for the assembly from the first district. Mr. Kennedy is also to be considered, but either gentleman could consider the questions at issue from the people's point of view who are most affected by the laws passed.

Perhaps the Rock county farmer will be content to learn from the jangled Dane county report of the tax commission, that the "rich people" are going to pay the taxes, not the poor working people. However, if they are wise they will not accept such guff, but think for themselves.

To get a republican this year one must support Taft and Sherman. If the term "mugwump" can be used properly, the would-be republicans who are for Wilson or Roosevelt, have no claim to a place on a republican primary ticket even.

When you vote next Tuesday vote with an understanding what it may mean to your pocketbook if you nominate the wrong man.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC AT OTTER CREEK CHURCH.

"Blues" Given Banquet by "Reds" the "Blues" Winning Out on Attendance—Accident Mars Pleasure.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Koshkonong, Aug. 31.—During the month of April, the Otter Creek Sunday school was divided into two sides the "reds" and the "blues," and the side showing the best attendance during the summer months were promised a banquet. The "Blues" captained by Emma Kraus, came out ahead. On Wednesday a picnic was held at the church and the "blues" given their banquet. Nearly sixty were present including the parents and a few visitors. The tables were loaded with every good thing imaginable and decorated with flowers. Each child on the winning side was given a bouquet of pansies and sweet peas.

After dinner each child under fifteen years was presented with a small testament for learning the ten commandments. A red letter bible was given Bessie Westrick, Irene Shuman and Ethel Miller for committing to memory 118 questions in the Junior catechism of the M. E. church.

Marie Hurd was perfect in attendance during the summer and will receive a prize. During the afternoon, a race by the married women was won by Mrs. Ralph Marquart. The little girls' race ended up rather sad. Irene Shuman won the race and Clara Bullis was second and in some way both fell. Clara was unhurt but Irene fell on her face spraining both wrists, and the back of her neck and breaking her glasses. She was taken to her home and Dr. Crosby, of Milton, sent for. She suffered considerable pain during the night but at present writing is feeling better and expects to be up around by Sunday. If the attendance at Sunday school keeps up during the fall and winter, another treat has been promised them in the spring.

Otter Creek school will begin Sept. 2, with Miss Florence Fox of Milton Junction as teacher.

CELEBRATION PLANS ARE NOW COMPLETE

THE LOCAL CARPENTERS' UNION MAKES BIG PREPARATION FOR LABOR DAY.

HUNDREDS OF VISITORS

Rockford and Beloit Unions and Their Friends Will Help Make Big Celebration a Success

Finishing touches to the plans for the big Labor Day celebration, which will be given by the local carpenters' and joiners' union and to which the Beloit and Rockford locals have been invited, were made at the meeting of the local union last evening.

Members of the various committees in charge of the celebration reported concerning the work already done and prospects for the finest and largest entertainment ever given in Janesville on Labor Day were assured.

Two representatives of the Beloit unions were here last evening, Claude Downs and Chas. Northby, and reported that the carpenters, painters and plumbers would be here in force. They will leave Beloit for Janesville morning at 9:15 on the St. Paul road and a train of ten coaches has been ordered. In addition special service has been provided for on the interurban and the Beloit representation will be large in size and strong in enthusiasm. They will bring the Leaver band of twenty-five pieces.

Rockford's delegation will leave on a special train on the Northwestern road and will arrive here shortly before ten o'clock. Five or six unions will come with their marching clubs and accompanied by the Rockford band will appear in the morning parade. It is anticipated that fully ten or twelve unions will be represented in the parade which will form at the court house park.

Members of the committee in charge of the procession announce unions, there will be as many as fifty the Janesville streets. In addition to the marching clubs of the various unions, there will be as many as fifty or sixty floats fitted out by local merchants and manufacturers making a display unparalleled in any industrial exhibit in Janesville. The business men have been quick to realize the value of such a display and have promised to exert their best efforts in fitting out their exhibits. It is safe to say that nothing of the kind ever given by Beloit or Rockford can compare with the plans that are being made here.

The parade committee announces that all the merchants and manufacturers are invited to enter their floats whether they have been seen by the committee personally or not. The co-operation of all is sought to make the day one long to be remembered.

Much time and thought has been expended on the morning program, but the grand entertainment of the day will come in the afternoon when the races at the park association grounds will be the big entertainment. Those who remember the program which was given at the park last year by the carpenters can imagine the character of this year's events. Better races and faster time are certain on Monday, however, and the largest crowd ever seen on the grounds is expected.

The automobile races will prove an interesting spectacle and are sure to be closely contested. The machines entered and the races are:
First race: 10 miles—For cars costing $1200 and under.
"Famous Billy" winner of races at Eagles' convention, "Yellow Jacket", of Lancaster; "Baby" Flanders; "Buick 10", holder of track record for one mile.

Second race, 20 miles—Free for all; will include the fastest cars in the 10 mile race and three fast unknown cars.

Motorcycling has become a popular sport of the city and a number of the local riders are entered. There are two runs, one of ten miles and the other of fifteen. F. A. M. rules will govern the speeders and when Starter-Anderson sends them off there is sure to be some fine riding.

First race, 15 miles, 30-50 class.
Second race, 10 miles, 30-50 class.
While the auto races promises to be the big attraction, the light harness events will also be interesting. John Sheridan who has had charge of the entries has completed a good list which is given below. Interest will be all the more keen as the speedsters entered are nearly all local horses.

No. 1 Class: Major K. Wm. Kullow; Rexetta; Dave Griffin, Daisy Jones, Norah Jones; White Hope, Sheridan Bros.

No. 2 Class: Easter Lily, John C. Nichols; Dexter S. Ed Schindler; Red Babe, Burt Money; Beauty, Dr. W. A. Murry; Black Beauty, Allen Walsh; Early Riser, W. I. Lovelace.

FIFTY PER CENT OF GRADUATING CLASS TO ATTEND COLLEGE

Large Number of Young People Who Finished High School This Year Will Continue Studies.

Fully fifty per cent of the members of the high school graduating class of 1912 will continue their studies at some college or university according to information received at the office of Superintendent Buell.

The class graduated this year had a total of forty-four students and over thirty of them will leave soon for their chosen institutions. This is a decided increase over the number which usually go away to school from the local institution each year, a fact which is gratifying to the Janesville school authorities.

The University of Wisconsin will receive the largest number of local high school graduates of any one institution. Five, one young lady and four young men will enter the Freshman class. Miss Joanna Hayes, John Simpson, Robert Cunningham, Thomas Foulkes and Gerald Woolf. The latter will take up the study of medicine while the others will enter the academic department.

Beloit college will have five Janesville young people in its Freshman class this fall but only three of them were graduated from the local high school this year. These three are Donald Korst, Glenn McCarthy, and Frank Sutherland. The other two are Aubrey Pember and Sidney Bostwick, who completed the course at Howe Military Academy at Lima, Indiana, last June.

Three of the young ladies of the class will perfect themselves in music. Miss Florence Crissey will study this subject at Northwestern University at Evanston, and Miss Katharine Wray will take the academic course at this institution. Miss Sara Alice Garbutt will enter the Oberlin Conservatory of Music at Oberlin College, Ohio, and Miss Grace Murphy will study piano and violin at the Chicago Conservatory of Music.

A number of the young ladies will prepare for the teaching profession. Miss Margaret Wray will enter the Stout Institute at Menomonie, Wis., Miss Edna Davis will attend the State Normal School at Los Angeles, Cal., and Miss Flora Robinson will take the course in the local teachers' training school, and Miss Mabel Madden goes to Whitewater Normal.

Miss Margaret Doty has chosen Rockford college, at Rockford, Ill., as the institution in which to begin her college career, and the Misses Katherine and Ruth Jeffers will attend Vassar College at Poughkeepsie, New York.

Leo Ford will enter Sacred Heart College at Prairie du Chien, Wis., and Allison Burdick will take up work at Milton college. Russell Wilkinson who was graduated here in the class of 1910 will be a Freshman at Lawrence College, Appleton, Stewart Williams who has already completed two years at this institution will return for his junior year.

Bruce Jeffris, Robert Carle and Kenneth Parker will return to Howe Military Academy. Raymond Hayes will take up the second year's work at Notre Dame University, Notre Dame, Ind. It is understood that other members of the 1912 class will attend college next year delaying entrance for various reasons.

BUYERS MAKE HASTE TO GRAB UP CROPS

Field Buying Movement Continues
Unabated and Three-Fourths of Tobacco Crops is Estimated Sold.

The field buying movement is being crowded along under high pressure in the southern growing sections until the contracts placed since our last report very likely aggregate a good many thousand acres. Scarcely has so much tobacco been sold in the same length of time or at figures more generally satisfactory to growers. It is estimated that fully 75 per cent of the crop that looks as if it might reach the sheds within the next three weeks is already under contract. In the northern sections we are advised that the buying is proceeding more leisurely because of the still higher prices demanded. Green tobacco never before sold so rapidly in Wisconsin so far away from the harvest.

A fair commencement is made with the harvest which will become more general next week, but a good portion of the crop is yet to be topped and a full month of suitable weather is needed to see it safely housed. The late portion of the crop, however, is coming forward very rapidly these days and with favorable conditions it is not impossible that nearly a full acreage may yet reach a harvest.

We are getting the kind of weather now just needed to bring to maturity the tobacco crop. Warmer weather has given the past two weeks an impulse and has been the making of a good many thousand dollars of leaf every day. It is quite evident if the early tobacco that has been most sought after by the buyers reaches maturity and cures out as good a leaf as is anticipated there will be plenty of medium and late tobacco that will also meet the standard. If frosts hold off to a reasonably late date there is reason to believe that Wisconsin will harvest at least a 100,000 case crop of binder leaf, enough to supply the market needs of the country if only the trade could afford to pay the price already established. It begins to look as if the buyers who started the market, banking on the theory that not over one-quarter of the crop could reach the sheds, have made a bad bet. And yet there is a month yet before the crop can be called secure and a lot of things might happen in that time.

ELOPERS

BY WILL SEAT.

It's just like you, Folger, to be there with the goods ahead of everybody else," cheerily called Mr. Olmsted from his comfortable seat, half-hidden behind the white and green masses of clematis that ran riot on the south piazza.

The young man mounted the marble steps. Mr. Olmsted extended his hand delightedly and chuckled in happy contentment. "Glad you're half an hour early, my friend. Come right in. Jenny'll be down in a minute."

"I find I can't go—a little touch of rheumatism," Mr. Olmsted explained apologetically. "But you two will enjoy a spin all the more without me, I know." He smiled significantly.

Folger buried himself in the depths of a great rustic chair, daintily swinging it back well within the shadow of the vines.

"This August weather's simply here!" he sighed, vigorously fanning himself with his straw hat.

The old gentleman, ignoring the reference to the weather, launched immediately into enthusiastic praise of the A. B. & A. deal that had been so successfully planned and so neatly carried into execution by Folger.

The young man's extraordinary feat had been almost the sole topic of conversation of the day in financial circles, and foxy old financiers, who had been beaten at their own game, sat up rigidly and took notice of the youngster. It meant millions to Folger, but danger to them.

Jenny came down, interrupting the conversation. Folger had said little. His modest words, combined with his composure after an exciting day, tended only to strengthen Mr. Olmsted's high opinion of him.

"Level-headed, that fellow Folger—not a bit put off by success—a truly great man!" he commented to himself with conviction.

"New car, 60-horse power, four-cylinder," Mr. Olmsted explained, sentimentally, as the young man and the girl prepared to take their departure. Ordinarily Mr. Olmsted was a man of few words.

"I was so anxious for you to try it this afternoon, Folger. I want your unerring judgment on its qualities. Take a long trip, and by all means don't think you've got to hurry home."

"Then, in my desperation this morning, this scheme flashed through my troubled brain. I resembled Folger. I saw that I could easily make myself into a respectable likeness of the bold young financier. Size, weight, carriage, everything was favorable. It seemed foolish and absurd at first, but as I turned it over in my mind it assumed a reasonable, a logical aspect. I seized upon it feverishly."

"Mr. Olmsted's near-sightedness, combined with my six-inch make-up and my disguised voice, gave me further hope. I acted promptly on the impulse. That's how it started, and you see for yourself how it is ending."

"O, yes, I can manage the machine all right," he assured her. "Tom is old enough to take care of himself. Don't worry about him, little girl. We'll run on to Wedgely—and get married," he said boldly. "Is it a go?"

He took silence for consent, and sped jerkily forward. The sun had fallen below the rim of tall pines standing dark and gaunt against the sky-line on the ridge beyond the river, and the long shadows fell across village and farm.

Five miles out, where a white farm house glistened in the setting sun from its lofty seat on a distant hill, the car stopped suddenly at Folger's command.

"Go over there, Tom," he spoke more gently, addressing the wondering chauffeur, "and get us some Albertas. Haskell lives there, and Haskell has the finest peaches in the country."

Tom shuffled off sulkily. "Now, little girl, I hope I have a pleasant surprise in store for you."

He laughed the old, merry laugh, snatched off his false mustache, removed the black wig, and looked up into her bewildered face smilingly.

The girl was speechless. "This is desperate business," he went on, trying to control his agitation. "Detectives have been at my heels for a month, even since that unlucky day."

"In Hilcoman's office this morning I overheard Folger talking to your father. From what I heard I was able to fill out the rest of the plot. I knew what it meant. The invitation to test the machine was a thinly disguised excuse. To tell the simple truth, I was desperate, as this attempt amply proves."

"LEVEL-HEADED, THAT FELLOW FOLGER."

It was Folger's voice. His tone was quiet, gentle, earnest and tender. The low, musical voice thrilled her. Then she was seized with a terrible fear. It could not be Folger. He was incapable of speaking like that.

The man saw her startled face and understood. "Don't be afraid," he said simply. "It's I—Alas Laval. You don't recognize an old friend?"

In July. I thought all was up with me. I couldn't reach you by letter or in any other way. I tried bribery—everything. It wouldn't work.

"Then Folger made his sensational deal, and the record detailed me to write up the story. I was perfectly familiar with every phase of it, and I admitted the master mind that could plan such a coup."

"O, I'm forgetting the most important part of the story," he corrected himself. "Two weeks ago a foolish idea possessed me. I must have been mad. I fairly blistered my face and neck in daily sun baths until I was a worthy brother to the brown man. Mr. Olmsted's everlasting stigma of 'poor pale face' maddened me. I was determined to cross the color-line if I did nothing else. I crossed it."

There was method in the adroit invitation to try the new car. Olmsted really cared little for the young man's opinion of it. Folger's attention to his daughter had lately increased to a point that put the retired financier in a most happy frame of mind, and now that the young man had accomplished a master stroke in the world of finance the fond parent entertained the firm belief that Jenny would waive all further objection to the marriage.

He laughed at her objection that she could not love him. His face clouded momentarily with anger as he thought of his daughter's attachment to Laval.

"Poor pale-faced devil!" he snapped. "Hardly above the rank of a cub reporter, and having the audacity to poke around amongst honest folks. I guess I've put a quietus on him for good."

"City or country?" inquired the chauffeur, ironically.

"Go straight on, and take the river road," commanded Folger. "We'll leave the city."

His imperious manner angered Jenny. It was just like Folger—cold, selfish, always thinking only of himself. She hated him.

They sped rapidly along the smooth river drive, mile after mile, unmindful of the beauty of river and field—he reserved and silent, she, rebellious, silent, humiliated.

"Mercy, stop!" cried the girl suddenly in dismay as they made a sharp turn in the road. "We've been speeding along here like two crazy people and just look what we're running into. Rushing into the very jaws of the lion. Let's turn back, or we will be discovered."

Her keen eyes had caught the pudgy form of Mr. Olmsted in the distance, followed closely by the stately figure of Folger, crossing the village street at rapid pace and appearing excitedly the single policeman the town boasted.

"Must have caused a panic back home," Laval chuckled. "Now, don't be afraid. We'll run in under the protecting branches of that live oak, and we'll be safe enough there until the storm blows over. They probably caught me at 4 o'clock express and beat us here. Sit still as a mouse while I go down and beard the lion in his den. No danger, I assure you. O, no, no, you must never go!"

His tone was imperious. He hurried down the street, laughing at her fears. His turn had come.

The two excited gentlemen of the man hunt had passed into the village inn when Laval approached the officer. He took the bluecoat aside, and thrust a $20 bill into his eager palm.

"Take that as a small reward for arresting those men. I know what they've been saying to you, every word. The young fellow is the guilty man, the other his partner. They're in a tight place, and they're trying to throw you off the track. Don't let them bluff you. Lock them up, keep them under lock and key until I come back, and you'll be highly rewarded."

"I'll do it right now, sir," readily assented the officer, as he hastened in the direction of the inn.

"It takes two to play at any game," Laval cheered the girl upon his return. "They've had their inning; now we'll have ours. If they don't succeed in turning over that little dry dog box they call their guard-house, and make their escape, they can fuss and fume to their heart's content until we return. It'll do 'em good. Out on the Sumner road, not three miles from here, my old chum, Perry Bonner, is laboring to save the heathen sinners down here in these woods. He knows my troubles, and it will give him infinite happiness to tie the knot. What do you—say, dear?"

The girl had at last found her voice. "I—I'll take him, too," she faltered sweetly.

SUNDAY ATTRACTION

The advance agent was just in and told us a very good story and one that fitly illustrates the character of people in the state from which the piece was taken. Finding it necessary to fill in date in a small town Arkansas, he jumped off the train and hurried up town anxious to locate the manager of the opera house, when he ran across of the town making his usual trip to the depot to see the new arrivals, which was about the only excitement the people there ever indulged in. "What's the population here," inquired the theatrical representative. "Democratic," replied the man, as he hurried on to the station "Well, well," said the agent to himself, "the Democrats are gaining every day" and went back and took the next train out of town. But while here the gentleman took occasion to impress us that "My Friend From Arkansas" which he is representing, and which is to be here at Myers theatre Sunday Sept. 1 matinee and night was one of the best and most entertaining plays on the road.

THE DIVORCE QUESTION

Wm. Anthony McGuire's new play "The Divorce Question" will be produced in this city the coming season under the management of Rowland and Clifford. This gripping play was one of the sensational successes of the past season in Chicago, running 106 nights at the McVickers theatre; all intelligent people should be deeply interested in witnessing this great moral lesson. The play is a strong virile denunciation of modern conditions and every word counts for its full value as the story swings along to a big conclusion.

It is merciless in its condemnation of those guilty of social neglect and there is no mistaking the meaning of the lines. They are at once indomitable and brave. The story of the play shows that pathetic phase of life where children are sacrificed to the selfishness of divorce, there is too much said about the duty that children owe their parents, for too little is said regarding the obligation of the parents.

"OFFICER 666"

Almost engaging story of incidents sustained by a love interest that appeals because of its sincerity, a unique angle of plot which is ingeniously unraveled and then as artfully unraveled, a number of sharp dramatic climaxes and real thrills, and above all, a sustained, wholesome and refreshing quality of fun, combine to make "Officer 666" which is to be seen here at the Myers theatre Oct. 8, the best farce in years. The piece furnishes many mysterious moments that are all the more enjoyable because of the substantial and laugh compelling quality of its story.

Reminiscences of the Civil War Survivors Co. F, 16th Wis.

Six survivors of Company F, Sixteenth Wisconsin Volunteers, were gathered on Wednesday at the home of one of them in Beloit to talk over old times and for reminiscences of the days when they took part in the war of the rebellion. The six were L. M. Nelson of this city, H. L. Phillips, Frank E. Peck, Oscar Graves and George D. Hart of Beloit, and Hiram Conroy of Sun Prairie, who with one other veteran comprised the surviving members of the company in this section of the state. The other, C. D. Black of Milton, they had gathered with the day before. Mr. Hart, who resides in South Beloit, was the host to the veterans at dinner, and they took supper in the evening with Frank E. Peck, who resides in the city of Beloit.

During the course of the day, while matters of interest were being discussed, one of the old soldiers produced a copy of the Janesville Daily Gazette published on September 23, 1886, which contained an account of a reunion of the company held in the G. A. R. post hall at Janesville. At that time twenty-nine members of the Janesville company, Company F, were present, with some of the officers and other members of the regiment. Those names were published in the list of those of the company in attendance at the reunion. The account and list of names are published herewith. Of the list the last five named were members of the Sixteenth Regiment, but not of Company F, and death has taken from those mentioned in the article the following: Col. Thomas Reynolds, Madison; Major Joseph Craig, Chicago; Timothy Shields, Albion, Kan.; John K. Smith, Beloit; Cal. C. Smith, Brodhead; Alfred Bullock, Union; L. S. Palmer, Evansville; R. A. Adams, Beloit; C. M. Smith, Waseca, Minn.; E. P. Bly, Janesville; Wm. B. Doolittle, Davenport, Iowa; James G. Wray, S. A. Cory, Sherman, Phelps, and J. B. Green of Janesville, and George A. Crocker of Pardeeville. The article in full, as it appeared in the Gazette on September 23, 1886, was as follows:

THE VETERANS MEET. A Reunion of Company F, Sixteenth Regiment. The Gather Here To Talk Over Old Times.—A Good Attendance.

The Grand Army Hall today presented an unusually lively scene. Company F, of the Sixteenth Wisconsin Volunteers, held its reunion here, and around the room were groups of old and middle aged men who had marched shoulder to shoulder during the weary days of the rebellion. By the side of the commander's desk sat Col. Thomas Reynolds, gray and wrinkled, but still every inch a soldier. Major Craig, who led the company through so many engagements, arrived this afternoon and was kept busy for some time shaking hands with the men who were so proud of the fact that they had done their fighting under him.

The battle of flags of the regiment were of much interest. Those that were carried at the beginning of the war were literally shot into threads and those that saw "service" during the last part of the "unpleasantness" were also torn and ragged, although not so much so as the others.

Upon some of the veterans time seems to have had little effect. There were some round and jolly, whose faces were only wrinkled with smiles, but there were others whose grey hairs showed that the years were making their mark. The wives and daughters in the past parlors were at visiting among themselves and at half past one the whole party sat down to long tables on which the dinladies had spread a bountiful dinner. Those who are in attendance at the reunion are: Col. Thomas Reynolds, Madison; Major Joseph Craig, Chicago, Ill.; Lieut. W. S. Scribner, Chicago; H. L. Phillips, Beloit; Frank E. Peck, Beloit; Timothy Shields, Albion, Kan.; John K. Smith, Beloit; Cal. C. Smith, Brodhead; Alfred Bullock, Union; Oscar Graves, Beloit; James M. Smith, Shirland; L. S. Palmer, Evansville; R. A. Adams, Beloit; C. M. Smith, Waseca, Minn.; E. P. Bly, Janesville; C. D. Balch, Beloit; Wm. Doolittle, Davenport, Iowa; George W. Dibble, Evansville; J. G. Gray, Janesville; L. M. Nelson, Janesville; J. E. Sargent, Janesville; S. A. Cary, Janesville; J. R. West, Evansville; George A. Crocker, Pardeeville; J. B. Green, Janesville; F. A. Cherry, Wisc.; C. W. Rehfeld, Hori-Cherry, Wis.; C. W. Rehfeld, Hori-Cherry, Wis.; J. B. Green, Janesville; C. W. Rehfeld, Hori-Cherry, Wis.; J. B. Green, Janesville; C. W. Rehfeld, Hori-Cherry, Wis.

Among the visitors we notice the following veterans: A. J. Harrison, 5th Wis., Lone Rock; F. S. Fenton, 5th Wis., Beloit; A. B. Ward, 5th Wis., Beloit; Mayhew London, 5th Wis., Janesville; F. W. London, 5th Wis., Janesville.

The officers of the company organization are: J. R. West, president, Evansville; C. M. Smith, secretary, Waseca, Minn.

At 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, Col. Reynolds of Madison, addressed the veterans as follows:

Comrades: This being the first reunion of any part of the regiment at which any considerable number of the members of all the companies have been present, and I being the senior officer in attendance, I deem it fitting and proper on behalf of those here not members of the F. to thank the men of that company for their enterprise in arranging this meeting and for the success of their undertaking. And so, amid the stirring scenes of the war, I recall with emotion the feelings which crowded upon me early in my acquaintance composing the new companies of the regiment.

It was my misfortune to be absent from the command a large portion of the time between your joining the regiment and the close of the rebellion, but I was very glad to know and appreciate your worth as soldiers. When the attack on Legett's Hill was ordered on the 21st of July, I confess I had some apprehension for the result. At that time the 16th Wisconsin had a standing in the estimation of the general officers equal to that of any similar organization in the great Army of the Tennessee. Prior to this four new companies, your among the number, had been added to the regiment, none of which had ever been in a general engagement, or in other words, had ever been "tried by fire." These facts were unknown by our brigade and division commanders, hence the regiment was put in the front line of the attacking column, with the 12th regiment under the command of its veteran Colonel George E. Bryant on the right. No one doubted the individual bravery of those companies, but the history of the war up to that time showed that more than individual bravery was required, particularly in passing through such a fiery ordeal as was then before us; but if you had not been disciplined under fire you had unbounded faith in the cause in which you were engaged, and in the invincibility of the great captain who was then directing your movements—"Uncle Billy" Sherman as the boys fondly called him. Just as the advance was ordered our gallant and lamented Colonel Cassius M. Fitch, while crossing a ravine, stumbled and fell against a stump revealing the suffering caused by the terrible wound he had received at Shiloh. Major Wm. F. Dawes, since deceased, had the immediate command of the new levy, and reported to me "that there was no flinching in his part of the line; that the new men were equal to Wellington's forces at Waterloo." The regiment's advance was through an open field and up the slope of the hill. The flag fell several times but as quick as thought it was raised up again by new hands. The last time, however, a momentary delay in raising it was caused by the fact that every member of the color guard had either been killed or seriously wounded. It was a moment of awful suspense—but we had a young hero at hand who took in the situation at a glance—Lieut. Thomas McCauley of Company G,—and seizing the flag from the grasp of the dying color sergeant, and proudly waving it, he bounded up the hill and planted it on the rebel breastworks—the regiment was with him—the victory was complete, and the hill which was acknowledged to be the key to Atlanta, was ours. General Leggett in his address before the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, Cleveland, Ohio, in October 1883, said, "some of the prisoners said with both pride and chagrin that this was the first time Pat Clybourne's division was ever routed, and General Hadden (confronted) in his report of the operations around Atlanta said: "that it was the bitterest fight of Gen. Clybourne's life." The victory was brilliant but our loss was terrible. I can pay no greater compliment to the brave men composing the new companies than to say that their conduct on this ever memorable occasion was fully equal to that of the old veterans.

In conclusion permit me to offer you my personal thanks for your kind invitation to attend this reunion, and to express my great gratification at meeting so many of my comrades here.

The social gathering will be continued at post headquarters this evening.

THE STOCK MARKET

Discount rates have gradually advanced both at home and abroad during the past ten days. This has resulted in the Bank of England raising its discount rate from 3% to 4%. In New York the preference on the part of Bankers is for call loans; there is little demand for commercial papers. Germany has again been seeking to discount paper in New York Market but with little success. France seems to be the only nation in a position to advance money outside of her own territory. New York Bankers, to maintain their surplus, may have to resort to a general calling of loans. High rates in London would seem to foreshadow a further advance in rates here.

The stock market is apathetic, price changes are limited and the volume of business is small. A close study of the technical position of the market discloses only a nominal short interest. The tendency on the part of investors is to sell minor holdings. This causes the market to lag. Taking into account the general conditions surrounding the market it would seem highly probable that any calling of loans must necessarily cause a recession in price. For the time being a financial situation is the controlling factor. An active financial period lies immediately ahead. There is a world-wide demand for money, to carry on commercial and industrial business. For this reason rates are advancing. The tendency in the U. S. will no doubt be towards higher rates until the money from our agricultural production begins to return to the usual channels. A severe strain will be put upon bankers this year to provide the money to move the crops. Our cultural yield is much greater than last year and in New York the bank surplus is only one-half of what it was a year ago. One of the most important questions to decide at this time is to what extent, if at all, high interest rates will affect stock market prices. It would seem to me that the money strain will be only temporary. The first of October should see financial conditions returning to normal. This being true, the dividend paying stocks should prove profitable purchases after the first wave of selling as a result of financial conditions has spent itself.

Answers to Inquiries.
Railroad Equipment Shares.—Such issues as Railway Steel Spring and American Car & Foundry shares are in line for higher prices. For three years the railroads have bought little new equipment. This year's large crop yield has brought home to the railroads the fact that sufficient equipment must at all times be maintained to handle their business. The result has been large orders for equipment during the past thirty days. It is stated that both of the above companies have orders on hand to run them well into the winter. This activity is bound to result in large earnings. I believe either of these issues can be purchased now with a fair chance of making a splendid profit from doing so.

Distillers' Securities.—This company pays 2% on its common shares and is earning about 2 1/2%. The recent activity in this stock has given rise to rumors that there will be an advance in the dividend rate. The stock is good speculation at the present price.
Texas Oil.—This issue pays dividends at the rate of 5%. Earnings on the stock for the past year were equivalent to about 8%. The present high price for this issue does not seem to be justified. The advance would seem to be more the result of local manipulation than intrinsic worth. I would not advise the purchase of this issue.

Fresh home grown cantaloupes are the feature of today's fruit market. They are the finest to be seen on the local market this season and they are very abundant. The wealthy eating apples which have been so very fine this season are still of a very good quality and they are having a very heavy demand for them. Blueberries are still very fine but they are getting scarce and the next few days will see the last of them. There were not any changes in prices on the local market this morning. Are Your Days to Be Light and Cheery or Dark and Gloomy?

We All Have Some Light Days and Some Dark Ones. It's Up to Us to Make As Many As Possible of Our Days Light.

You cannot view life in its proper light if you are being dragged down by some ailment that is slowly sapping your strength. You cannot "do things" or "be worth while." The perfectly balanced man or woman is the person who makes the biggest success of life. They see the sunny side of life and exact all that is coming to them in this world. The sickly puny person must take what he can get.

Get Out of the Rut! If You're Sick Or Out of Condition Your Spine is Out of Line. Chiropractic Will Take the Kinks Out of It. Nature Will Make You Well.

Let's take Rheumatism as an example. There's nothing that takes the vim out of a man quicker than Rheumatism. The sharp, twitching, anguish caused by Rheumatism is the veriest kind of torture and anyone afflicted with this trouble cannot get the most out of life. The cause of Rheumatism is well illustrated in the accompanying picture of a portion of the spinal column. With the cartilage between the vertebra normal in size, (see Arrow No. 8) and the nerve normal (see Arrow No. 9) to have Rheumatism would be impossible. Cartilages Nos. 6, 10 and 11, being thin, allow the vertebrae to press on the nerve as the arrows Nos. 7 and 12 indicate, shutting off the flow of nerve nourishment which is transmitted through the nerve. This nerve, owing to the pressure of the subluxated vertebrae becomes atrophied or small, the muscles and tissues, the impinged nerve supplies begin to ache and pain for want of food and you will begin to suffer all the anguish of the racking pains of genuine Rheumatism. Chiropractic, by adjusting the vertebrae and restoring them to their true place, releases the impinged nerve and Nature, sending her normal supply of nerve food over the released nerve tends to set that portion of the body afflicted to true health again.

The Joys of a Morning in the Country.

A COOL, fragrant breeze stole into the room and stirred the snowy curtains at the window.

Mrs. Van Horn wondered sleepily why she had done such an unprecedented thing as wake up. The sky was just reddening. She turned luxuriously and thought what a long, delicious nap she would have before she would need to rise.

Just then, a rooster broke loose beneath her window and she knew then what had awakened her.

In true Maude Adams fashion, he called for the sun to get up. He called again long and loudly.

"Oh, go away," muttered Mrs. Van Horn. "The idea of letting a thing like that loose at this time in the morning."

But chattering refused to go away and continued at his business of waking up the sun.

Mrs. Van Horn got angrier and angrier. She looked around the room for something to throw at him. Finally she got out, took some paper, and leaning out of the window, waved it frantically, shouting "Shoo!"

He only turned one bright eye up at her and at last, not because she wanted him to, but because he was ready, moved on.

Exhausted and wide awake, she crawled back into bed.

She was just getting drowsy, when a neighbor's big dog began to bark—gruff, reverberating barks that could be heard half a mile.

"This is awful," said Mrs. Van Horn. "If I don't get some sleep I'll be exhausted."

She got up and peeked out the windows to see where the dog was.

He was too far away, however, for her to shut him up, though she did shout at him futilely a few times.

At last, however, his morning matins were over.

"Maybe, I can get a few winks now," she thought.

Just as drowsiness was once more descending upon her, some young robins in a tree near the window decided it was breakfast time, and began to call loudly for fruit and worms.

"What on earth is that!" exclaimed Mrs. Van Horn, for young robins when they are sounding the breakfast call, haven't exactly the voice of opera singers.

"I never heard such a racket," muttered Mrs. Van Horn. "It sounds like files or saws or something. I might as well get up. My nerves will be on edge if I listen to that long."

So she rose and wearily dressed. "It is only six o'clock," she said as she looked at her watch, "and they don't have breakfast until half past eight. I'll starve."

She went down through the silent house to the porch. "I don't see how anybody can sleep," she thought.

An hour or so later, Dolly, her hostess, came out. "Well, I never!" she exclaimed. "You are an early riser!"

"Sometimes," said Mrs. Van Horn.

"But I don't wonder you got up early, the country is so lovely in the morning," went on Dolly. "It's so different from the city."

"It certainly is," responded Mrs. Van Horn, and under her breath, she concluded, "and it's the city for mine."

The Kitchen Cabinet

K NOW the true value of time; snatch, seize and enjoy every moment of it. No laziness, no procrastination; never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.

—Earl of Chesterfield.

KITCHEN COMFORTS.

The kitchen is often the last room in the house to plan for or equip, when it should be the first consideration, for it is here that the large majority of women spend the greatest part of their time.

When it is possible to have the things we want, if our tastes are simple, a painted wall is good, for it can be cleaned and kept sanitary.

A small-sized kitchen is the model these days. We have graduated from the idea of the ancient kitchen, where one walked a day's journey getting the three meals a day.

A kitchen cabinet holding all the necessary cooking materials; a pin-covered table, a good, well-placed sink high enough to wash dishes in without stooping (one may have words with the plumber before you get it high enough if you are an average woman in height, for they seem to have a deep-seated desire to place all sinks the same height, regardless of the woman who has it to use), and a sink-drawing board at the end, are all necessities.

One interesting housewife has a picture hung in her kitchen wall that is an inspiration to her. When washing dishes she can enjoy its beauties and its presence is a constant uplift.

We have passed the day of back-breaking iron kettles and the kitchen utensils may be as artistic in coloring as one's taste desires.

A small rocking chair is a great addition to the kitchen comforts, for one may often drop into it for a moment when waiting for a cake to be baked, or while preparing fruit or vegetables.

Linoleum on a soft wood floor is the easiest on the feet for a floor, and it is so easily kept clean. The floor should harmonize with the wall color, but be darker.

When ironing, place a folded rag under the feet and notice how much less tiring the day's work will be.

When we spend a little more time in planning and furnishing our kitchen and the maid's bedroom, we will perhaps have reduced the servant problem a little towards its lowest terms.

MORE ABOUT CANCER.

The human fetus passes through a series of stages corresponding to the scale of animal life, from the single cell to the most highly organized, in which groups of cells are differentiated to form organs differing in function as widely as liver and brain. Animals frequently revert to earlier stages of development, as in the case of the whale, that is not a fish, but a mammal, returned to water. That the cells composing an organ should frequently revert to their amebic or original primitive type is less surprising than that they should not do so more frequently. The cancer cell is a typical renegade, growing without reference to the needs of the organism. Darwin has shown that the determining factor in variation is food. Equally efficient is the mental state, which is largely determined by the food, as in the wolf and the sheep. From which it is natural to conclude that the determining factors in cancer are food and thought. It has recently been determined by Levin (Journal of American Medical Association) that there is a pre-cancerous condition of the tissues, a local predisposition, and Sir Henry Buntin, a noted English authority, announces his conclusion that cancer is constitutional and must have similar treatment to that of consumption. This suggests the systematic prevention of cancer by proper diet and right thinking, which implies such popular education as it is the purpose of these hints to give.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

AN EXPERIMENT.
YOU may paddle all day long; but it is when you come back at nightfall and look in at the familiar room that you find love or death awaiting you beside the stove; and the most beautiful adventures are not those we go to seek.—Stevenson.

"What canst thou see anywhere that thou seest not here? Behold the heavens and the earth and all the elements, for out of these are all things made."—Thomas A. Kempis.

Did you ever try to look at your home town and the country round about it as if you had come from a distance to see it?

Truly that is a most interesting experiment.

On a glorious summer evening just at the witching hour of sunset, three of us were drifting about in a canoe on a body of water near our home.

Said one of the three, "How lovely the water looks tonight."

Said another, "Really I don't know as I saw anything any prettier on my vacation, though I traveled two thousand miles."

At that the third member of the party sat up in the canoe and looking around as if he had suddenly seen something new and strange inquired, "Do you folks realize that if we had traveled two thousand miles to see this we would say it was one of the most beautiful places we ever saw?"

Whereupon we all sat up, looking out over the water through eyes from which the scales of habit had been removed for a moment, suddenly realized that what he said was true.

Is it not strange how firmly we all cling to the idea that beauty is a thing which must be hunted and journeyed after, and may never by any chance be found at home?

Next summer when we go on our vacation, some happy day when our ship comes in, and we sail away in it for a voyage around the world, then, we tell ourselves, we shall really see something very beautiful.

And all the time we look with dull eyes at the beauty which lies just outside our own door.

We wonder at the peasants who live in the most beautiful part of the Alps in the wonderful places that voyagers cross the world to see, and who do not realize that there is anything beautiful in the surroundings, or even trouble to lift up their eyes to the hills.

If we fail to recognize that measure of beauty, however humble, which lies without our own doors, are we any less stupid than these peasants? Beauty is not wholly in a felicitous arrangement of objects. It is also in an open eye and an eager heart.

"Though we travel the world over to find the beautiful," says Emerson, "we must carry it with us or we find it not."

Are you discontented because you cannot travel? Are you fearful because there are so many beautiful things in the world that you will never see? That is hard, my friend, I admit. But hadn't you better make sure that none of those beautiful things which you will never see are just beyond your own doors?

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—My husband is very unkind to our child, who has a slight infirmity. She is sensitive and the brood-beater frightens her so she hardly knows what is said or what she is to do. I want to raise her well, but I do not think she is in the right atmosphere and I cannot afford to send her to a boarding school. Talking to him does no good.

MRS. T.

Have you tried to keep the child out of his sight when he is home? Explain to her that she mustn't be frightened at her father because he doesn't realize what he is doing and try to make up for his treatment by your love and companionship with the little one. Perhaps you can arrange with one of your neighbors to keep the child with her part of the time while the father is home.

If he goes far in his abuse, take the matter before the juvenile court in your city.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I had a little quarrel with my lady friend about six weeks ago. I have not seen her since. Her mother visited my aunt last week and said that if we ever go together again I will have to be the first one to speak to her daughter. Do you think that would be right? After the quarrel I came to see her on a Wednesday night, as I always did, and she was not at home. I asked her mother where she was and she answered roughly: Over to her aunt's house. I left and did not go near the house again.

J. J. K.

If you care very much for the girl, write her a little note and ask if she won't be friends with you again. Girls sometimes do what they are sorry for.

afterwards, and it is not unmanly to overlook some things, especially when two people are really fond of each other.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Is there some way of sweetening lard after it has stood so long that it is very stale?

MRS. W. A. JARNETT.

Put the lard on the stove to heat and slice into it a whole raw potato. When smoking hot take out potato and pour lard into clean receptacle.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl of twenty-three and have been keeping company with a gentleman two years my senior, for seven months. He has always been very kind and gentle toward me but one night when we returned from a show he asked me for a kiss. When I refused he said he would not call again until I wrote him and would be satisfied to kiss him every time he left: also he said that I do not care for him. Please advise me. I like him very much, but I think it would be very unmanly for me to do it, since we are not engaged.

HEARTBROKEN ANN.

If the man really loves you he will not wait for you to write him any kind of a letter. He will come and ask to be friends without demanding more than any self-respecting girl should give to a man to whom she is not engaged.

You did quite right, my dear, and if he doesn't prove the right sort, just forget him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Is labor day always the first Monday in September?

M. A.

The story visited the Strange home Saturday and left a baby boy. Stranks, the police say, did not want to come home and started to abuse his wife. Neighbors interfered and Man First Carved Woman.

A piece of stone, 18 inches high, on which is roughly cut in bas-relief the figure of a woman, is the oldest known representation of the human form. It was discovered by Dr. La-lanne in excavations in the grottoes of Laussel, France, and is thought to be 20,000 years old. Scientists believe that it came between the ages of the mammoth and the reindeer, when the artist would have used sharpened flints as tools.

chased him out of the house. Yesterday he returned and found his wife and baby alone in bed. He chased her into the back yard. Clothed only in her night dress, the woman clung to her newly-born babe while the police say, hurried stones at her head.

This seems like an extreme case, but police records don't say so. Yet we are urged by the anti-suffragists, who in turn are urged by politicians and "interests" opposed to equal suffrage, to put faith in ALL men and trust to masculine chivalry to govern women justly.

Masculine chivalry lately bombarded a suffragist speaker at Dayton, O., with table refuse. It also called out the fire department and turned the hose on a woman in Tallapoosa, Ga., because she was denouncing the conditions under which children worked in the local mills.

Tallapoosa is a city of cotton mills. The mayor of the town is a prominent anti-suffragist. First he called upon the city marshal to arrest the woman, who was simply addressing an open-air meeting from her automobile. The marshal refused to arrest her. Then this gallant mayor ordered out the fire department, which played upon the woman speaker and her audience and temporarily put a stop to the criticism of child labor by breaking up the meeting.

Man's chivalry! Have you ever applied it to your pocketbook?

How about those "sharks," who, in the guise of lawyers, promoters and such, prey upon widows until they get their teeth on the insurance money or the bit of property that stands between the widow and the poorhouse?

How about those employers of women who have replaced men in their shops and factories because they can get women to do the same work at half the wages?

How about those beasts who live upon the honor of women—who take little girls and put them into houses of shame?

How about those public officials who wax rich from tolls upon gambling dens, where the young sons of sorrowing mothers are started on the road to ruin? Is that chivalry?

And at home—how about those husbands who dole out miserable pittances to their wives, treating them worse than a hired girl? Indeed, the hired servant in many a home is treated like a princess in comparison to the treatment meted out to the wife of a husband who has sworn to cherish and provide for her. Somehow a lot of men have an idea that they can't insult a wife—she is such an inferior creature that she ought to be thankful for anything that is given her.

Concerning Dr. Goddard

DR. GODDARD.
The above is a picture of Wisconsin's leading Specialist, who treats Chronic Diseases, without resorting to Surgery or the knife.
For many years past, in certain troubles such as Rupture, Chronic Appendicitis, Gall Stones, Gout, and many Diseases peculiar to Women, it was thought necessary to resort to Surgery.
But in the past few years such brilliant men in the profession as Dr. Leitch of Paris, the leading physician of the world today, Dr. McEwen, Professor of Medicine at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, Sir Henry Burdette of England, and Dr. Page of Boston, Mass., not to mention many others of great prominence, have become firmly convinced and have proven that many of these cases can be more successfully, better and more safely cured by modern treatment than by the knife.
And it is along these same advanced lines that Dr. Goddard has had his remarkable success in treating Chronic Diseases without operation.
The Doctor came to Janesville once every four weeks and freely gave consultation to all who may call on him at the Myers Hotel.
He comes to us highly recommended, and has had many of our people as his patients whom he has cured after they had tried many other physicians without relief. In talking with the writer recently the Doctor said: "The tendency among the medical profession in the past has been to put the knife into everybody on the slightest pretext, but with the great advancements that have been made in the Science of Medicine in the last few years, many of the blunders of the past have been seen, and they are not resorting to Surgical operations in one quarter the cases that they formerly did. I can truthfully say, and can prove it that 80% of the so called cases of Chronic Appendicitis that have been submitted to operations in the past could have been cured much better by our modern methods of treatment, thus saving the patient all the suffering and danger, not to mention the expense that accompanies surgical operations. I have proven the truth of this statement right here in your community and I should like to show you scores of letters, from grateful patients whom I cured to prove it to you also."
The Doctor has lately written a little book that is intensely interesting entitled, "Modern Methods of treating Chronic Diseases without surgical Operation," which he will gladly send to anyone absolutely free of charge on request.
Anyone suffering from any Chronic condition especially if it has failed to respond to the ordinary treatment should certainly avail themselves of the opportunity to consult Dr. Goddard on his next visit to Janesville, on Tuesday, September 10th—at the Myers Hotel or write to him at his permanent address 121 Wisconsin St., Milwaukee, Wis. Send for his little book anyway. It will greatly interest you.

SIDEWALK KETCHES.

WASH DAY.
(By Howard L. Rann.)

WASH DAY is a gloomy anniversary which falls on Monday. It also falls on anybody who happens to get in the way, especially caustic husbands who come home and kick about the bill of fare.

The reason wash day comes on Monday is because it is usually preceded by Sunday, which is used by people to store up enough rest and religion to last them during the remainder of the week.
Wash day begins at four o'clock in the morning and winds up along about noon with an exchange of asstringent pleasantries by the entire cast. Very few people are able to extract the dust from a large family, washing without repining at a high altitude.
There are two kinds of washing—white and buff. The former is produced by chasing the clothes up and down the corrugated bosom of a zinc tub board, after they have been anaesthetized, anaesthetized and pasteurized. This treatment turns out a wash that will make every neighbor in the block turn to a pale greenish pallor.
Buff washing is the kind which is produced during a strike in the laundry. It consists mainly of surplus bluing, half erased peach stains and long, horizontal welts in the shirt bosom. Whenever a buff washing is hung out on the line, women who as sail their clothes with bar soap and muscle will utter disparaging remarks about it at the dinner table.
One of the nicest features about wash day is that nobody wants anything to eat except the head of the house, and he is invited to rummage through the pantry and fatten up on the succulent doughnut. The patience of man under such harrowing circumstances is something marvelous, and yet how few men express their real emotions.
Some women employ their husbands on wash day. This is a humiliating practice and ought to be made legal grounds for a divorce. What could be more pathetic than the sight of a strong, red-blooded man with high ambition and eloquent sideburns, wig-wagging back and forth in tune with a washing machine and being sprayed with suds and perspiration? This is not man's sphere, but devotion to his wife and fear of the consequences drive him to it.

Municipal Affairs Of Vital Interest

GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION SAVES MONEY FOR TRENTON.

That the commission form of government in Trenton, N. J., will save for the city in one year $100,000 through a decrease in running expenses is the opinion of Mayor Donnelly of Trenton. He has prepared a paper to show the advantages which have been gained from the city's new governmental system. "Trenton today shows signs of civic improvement," he says, "that were hardly thought of under the old regime."
Enumerating specific benefits, Mayor Donnelly says—"In the item of street improvements alone the city of Trenton up to this time can show a complete saving of $15,000 in paving contracts. In the matter of advertising the city is saving two-thirds. We have a greater mileage of improved streets, the work on which is of better standard. Street signs have been placed in conspicuous places for the convenience of citizens and visitors.
"Under the commission government back taxes are being collected. When the commission assumed control, I am informed, there was about $1,000,000 in back taxes on the books. The present government will aggregate $18,000 a year when the reduction in legal fees is considered. The price of legal advertising has been reduced to one-third of the cost under the old system, involved a cost of $850,000 for the construction of a filtration plant, while the plans adopted under the present system anticipate a cost of $450,000 or a saving of $200,000.
"The first six months of commission government in Trenton was of necessary continuation of administration of affairs under the old system of inefficiency and extravagance. In reality the commission began its career of financial responsibility six months after it took office. The city's revenue is increasing, savings are being made and efficiency has been established in all departments of the city government."

BEST GARBAGE INCINERATOR TO BE FOUND IN MILWAUKEE.

Mayor Bading has received copies of the U. S. Consular reports showing that German experts have informed the municipal government of Chemnitz that Milwaukee possesses the most efficient and satisfactory garbage incinerator plant in the United States.
The mayor expressed much gratification upon reading this announcement. He recommended, when heard by the commission several years ago, not only this method of garbage disposal but watched construction of the plant.
It was inspected by Ald. Heinecke of Chemnitz late in 1911, when Milwaukee was visited by a delegation of officials and engineers from that city that traveled through the United States seeking the most practical ideas in garbage disposal for adoption in improvements of this character contemplated by the city of Chemnitz. The consular general writes that the Milwaukee idea will be adopted there.

TAX ON FORTUNE TELLERS LEVIED IN ELWOOD, INDIANA.

Elwood, Ind.—The city council has instructed the city attorney to draw up an ordinance taxing clairvoyants, palmists, mind readers, fortune tellers and others of this class. It is estimated that more than $1,000 a month is carried away by traveling fortune tellers who find Elwood's people "easy marks." The fortune tellers will be asked to pay a tax of $10 a day, $50 a week or $125 a month. Failure to comply with the new ordinance will bring a penalty of $50 and costs, with a jail sentence of from ten days to three months added.

POPLAR AND WILLOW TREES MAKE TROUBLE WITH SEWERS.

Wilkesburg, Pa.—Wilkesburg's streets may be denuded of shade trees. The Borough Council last week passed an ordinance on second reading providing that all poplars and willows along the streets be destroyed. The ordinance forbids the planting of such trees. The Councilmen believe that the roots of these trees choke up the sewers. The poplar is a favorite tree in the borough, and there are many willows. Citizens will protest against the final passage of the ordinance.

TO FIX STANDARD COST OF GAS FOR COUNTRY.

Washington, D. C.—Proposing that Congress order an investigation of the Washington Gas Light company by experts with a view to establishing a standard for cost, operation and service of gas companies over the entire country, Congressman Lobeck filed a report which completes a hearing which he has conducted during the last four months. A physical valuation of the plant is demanded as a condition precedent to a reduction in the price of gas, which on information obtainable, Lobeck believes could be cut from $1 to 75 cents. The work of conducting the investigation fell to Lobeck as a member of the district committee.

Provides City with Pulmotor.

Los Angeles, Calif.—The Police Commission has accepted the offer of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation for the free use of a pulmotor, or machine for the resuscitation of persons suffering from gas asphyxiation, smoke or drowning. The machine will be kept at the receiving hospital.

New Crusher For Center.

At a special meeting of the Richmond city council Friday evening of last week a committee was appointed to investigate the buying of a stone crusher for the city, as the one in use, now is about "all in" and a new one is needed for next year.

DEMAND THAT EXPOSED FRUIT MUST BE SCREENED.

Augusta, Ga.—Dr. A. L. Haggerty, food inspector of the Board of Health has stated that he is going to strictly enforce the screen ordinance, which provides for all fruit dealers to cover their fruit with wire screens to keep the flies off, and prevent the spread of disease. Four dealers have been fined, and Dr. Haggerty has several other fruit dealers in the lower part of the city under close watch, and if they do not take this as a warning and get screens they, too, will have to appear before the recorder.

MILWAUKEE TO PURCHASE MORE AUTO PATROL WAGONS.

The purchase of two new police auto patrols is authorized in a resolution recommended for adoption by the Milwaukee council police committee. The machines will cost $3,500 each.
According to Police Chief John T. Jansen, the two autos probably will be installed at the west and south side stations.
In addition to the auto, an ambulance will be stationed at the south side station, as this station is in the district where most of the factory accidents occur.

WANT ELECTRIC FRANCHISE FROM CITY OF BOSCOBEL.

The Lancaster Electric Light company is asking a franchise from the city of Boscobel to transmit electric current from its plant, here to connect with the plant there and furnish light and power for that city, just as the Gena company supplies Plattville, Cuba City and other towns in that vicinity. Boscobel's mayor has appointed a committee to investigate the matter and report their findings as to the feasibility of the plan.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI HAS MUNICIPAL HOG FARM.

Kansas City, Mo., has started a municipal hog farm and is doing so well with it that it may be increased in size and used to dispose of the garbage from a large area of the eastern section of the city. There are now 45 hogs on the farm and 25 more are to be purchased at once. Already the city has made a profit of $400 from its experiment, not counting the saving in the expense of the garbage removal.

SHEBOYGAN TO LAY MILE OF NEW WATER MAINS.

The Sheboygan City Water Commission has still about a mile of new main to lay in the city this year. Altogether this year's extensions and replacements will total a considerable distance. About 600 feet of new main will be laid to the new fish hatchery and 500 or 600 feet on North Second street. Many small sections are provided for.

May Increase License Fee.
The village of Muscoda will hold a special election next Tuesday on the question of increasing its saloon license fees from $200 to $500 per year.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
You should be careful if in employ and consider your employers interests your own. Advancement will come to you if this rule is followed. Otherwise, losses and disappointments will be your lot for the coming year.
Those born today will be capable and efficient and will succeed if they concentrate on their own affairs and do not try to manage those of other peoples.

SUFFERED TORMENT WITH ECZEMA

For Many Years. On Thigh. Also on Scalp. Awful Itching Skin. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

Lebanon, O.—"My eczema started on my thigh with a small pimple. It also came on my scalp. It began to itch and I began to scratch. For several days I could not sleep. I tried everything I could get my hands on, but it did not help. I would scratch until the blood would soak through my underwear, and I could not talk to my friends on the street, but I would be 'digging' and 'punching' at my thigh. I was very much ashamed. The itching was so intense I could not sleep at night. I was in bed and warm. I certainly suffered torment with that eczema for many years. I chafed after everything I ever heard of, all to no avail. I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. Imagine my delight when I applied the first dose to that awful itching fire on my leg and scalp; in less than a minute the itching on both places ceased. I got some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the second day I never had another itching spell, and Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me. I was troubled with awful dandruff all over my scalp. The Cuticura Soap has cured that, too." (Signed) L. R. Fink, Jan. 22, 1912.
*Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

When he turned into Van Ness avenue, the Ryan house was one block beyond him, a conglomerate white mass, like a crumbling wedding cake slowly settling on a green lawn. He surveyed it as he approached, noting its ugliness with a musing satisfaction. Its size and the bright summery perfection of its surrounding grass and flower beds lent it impressiveness and redeemed it from the position of a colossal blight on the prospect to which architect and builder had done their best to relegate it. Prosperity, a complacent, overwhelming prosperity, was suggested not only by its bulk but by the state of studied finish and neatness that marked mansion and grounds. There did not seem to be a wilting flower bed or withered leaf left on a single stalk in the garden borders. Every window-pane gleamed like a mirror, innocent of dust or blemishing spot. The marble steps up which Cannon mounted were as snowily unsoiled as though no foot had passed over them since their last abjuration.

The door was opened by a Chinaman, who, taking the visitor's card, left him standing in the hall, and, deaf to his queries as to where he should go, serenely mounted the stairs. Cannon hesitated a moment, then hearing a sound of voices to his right, entered the anteroom that gave on that suite of apartments into which Dominick had walked on the night of the ball. They were softly lit by the afternoon sun filtering through thin draperies, and extended in pale, gilt-touched vista to the shining emptiness of the ball-room. The old man was advancing toward the voices when he suddenly saw whence they proceeded, and stopped. In the room just beyond him Cornelia Ryan and a young man were sitting on a small, empire sofa, their figures thrown out in high relief against the background of silk-covered wall. Cornelia's red head was in close proximity to that of her companion, which the intruder saw to be clothed with a thatch of sleek black hair, and which he recognized as pertaining to a young man whose father had once been shift boss on the Rey del Monte, and who bore the patronymic of Duffy.

Cornelia and Jack Duffy had the appearance of being completely engrossed in each other's society. In his moment of unobserved survey, Cannon had time to note the young woman's air of bashful, pleased embarrassment and the gentleman's expression of that tense, unsmiling earnestness which attends the delivery of sentimental passages. Cornelia was looking down, and her flaming hair and the rosy tones of her face, shading from the faintest of peaches to deepening degrees of coral, were luminously vivid against the flat surface of cream-colored wall behind her, and beside the black pool and thin, dark cheek of her companion. That something very tender was afoot was quickly seen by the visitor, who softly withdrew, stepping gingerly over the fur rugs, and gaining the entrance to the hall with a sensation of hurried alarm.

An open door just opposite offered a refuge, and, passing through it with a forward questing glance alert for other occupants who might resent intrusion, the old man entered a small reception-room lit by the glow of a hard coal fire. The room was different in furnishings and style from those he had left. It had the austere bleakness of aspect resultant from a combination of bare white walls and large pieces of furniture of a black wood upon which gold lines were traced in ornamental squares. An old-fashioned carpet was on the floor, and several tufted arm-chairs, begirt with dangling fringes, were drawn up so closely before the fire. This burned cheerily, a red focus of heat barred by the stripes of a grate, and surrounded by a chastely severe white marble mantelpiece. He had been in the room often before and knew it for Mrs. Ryan's own particular sanctum. When a celebrated decorator had been sent out from New York to furnish the lower floor of the house, she had insisted on retaining in this apartment pieces of furniture and the works of art which she approved, and which the decorator wished to banish to the garret. Mrs. Ryan had her way as she always did, and the first fine "boots" of furniture which she and Con had bought in the days of their early affluence, and various oil paintings also collected in the same era of their evolution, went to the decking of the room she used for her own and oftenest sat in.

Cannon approached the fire, and stood there looking up at the life-size portrait in oils of the late Cornelius Ryan, which hung over the chimney-piece. The artist had portrayed him as a thickly-whiskered man with the complexion of a healthy infant and eyes of baby blue. A watch chain, given him by his colleagues in the old days at Shasta, and formed of squares of quartz set in native gold, was painted with a finished carelessness which had pleased Mrs. Ryan even more than the likeness had done. In showing the picture, she was wont to say proudly: "Just look at the watch chain! Seems as if you could almost hear the ticking of the watch."

Cannon was speculating as to the merits of the likeness when he heard the silken rustling of skirts, and turned to greet his old friend. She came in smiling, with extended hand, richly clad, the gleam of a fastening jewel at her neck. Her hair was dressed with a shining, smooth elaboration, drawn up tightly at the sides and arranged over her forehead in careful curls. As she and her visitor exchanged the first sentences of greeting he noticed that she looked much older and more worn than she had done the last time he had seen her, but her face was as full of pugnacious force as ever. While Della Ryan's body lived her spirit would hold its dominion. She had ruled all her life and would do so to the end.

They sat down on either side of the fire and the old man said: "I don't know whether I ought to be in here. The Chinaman left me to my fate, and I had to nose about myself and find out where I belonged."

"Oh, that's Lee," she answered with a short laugh. "He waits on the door every other Sunday. We've had him ten years and no one's ever been able to make him show people into the parlor. He thinks it better to leave them standing in the hall till one of us sees the card. Then he'll go down and tell them as sociably as you please to go right in and sit down. I asked him why he didn't do it at first, and he said: 'They might steal something.'"

Cannon looked into the fire with an amused eye.

"I guess he thought I was after the spoons. It's a dangerous habit, for I took the first turning to the right and butted into Cornelia and a young man who gave me to understand I'd come the wrong way around."

"What did they say?" said the mother, her face stiffening with sudden disapproving surprise.

"They didn't say anything. That was just it. They didn't even see me. But they certainly led me to believe that I'd got somewhere where I wasn't wanted. I may not be smart, but a hint doesn't have to be much harder than the kick of a mule for me to see it."

Mrs. Ryan looked at him consider-

"Yes," she said, nodding. "It's a case, I guess."

"It ought to be satisfactory," he answered. "Pat Duffy, the father of those boys, was one of the finest fellows I ever knew. He was shift boss on the Rey del Monte in seventy-one when I was the superintendent. He got out of Virginia with his pile, didn't lose it like the others. He had an easy three million when he came down here and bought the Bristed house on Pine street. And Jack's the best of his children. Maggie, who married the English baronet, was a nice sort of girl, but she's never come back, and Terry's smart enough, but not the kind you can bank on. Jack's a good, straight boy. Cornelia couldn't do better."

"That's what I think," said the mother, who, however, looked grave and worried. "Cornelia's thirty. It's time for her to settle, and she'll make a good wife. They'll live here, too. There'll be no kicking up of their heads and going off to Europe or New York and thinking themselves too good to come back to California, like Maggie Duffy and her baronet. I want them here. I want to see some grandchildren round this house before I die. I want to know where Con's money is going to."

She sighed, and it was obvious that her heart was heavy.

"Yes," she said, "it's a good marriage and I'm pleased at it. Jack's a Roman Catholic but you can't have everything down here in this world."

The Ryans were Protestants, almost the only prominent Irish-American family in San Francisco which belonged to that church. Cornelius Ryan had been a North-country man, and went out with the Orangemen when they paraded. He had been firm in his faith and so had his wife, and with the Hibernian's violent devotion to creed they had made public their antipathy to the Church of Rome and their hopes that their children would not make alliances with its members.

"Oh well," said Cannon with a shrug of vague tolerance, "a man's beliefs don't matter. With a woman it's a different thing. She brings up the children and takes her religion hard. Jack won't interfere with Cornelia that way."

"Perhaps not," said the mother. There was a slight pause and then she said with a sigh:

"Well, thank God, one of my children's going to marry as I want."

She was gazing into the fire and did not notice the quick look, sly and piercing, that her companion shot at her. The conversation had suddenly, without any effort of his, fallen upon the subject to which he had intended directing it.

"Yes," he said, looking away from her, "you've had one disappointment. That's enough."

"Disappointment!" she echoed in a loud voice. "Disappointment? I've lost my son; lost him as if he was dead—worse than if he was dead, for then I'd know he was happy and safe somewhere."

It was a cry of pain, Rachel mourning for her child. The note of feeling in it checked the remark on Cannon's lips. He understood what her suffering was and respected it.

"Why, Bill Cannon," she went on, turning the perturbed fierceness of her face on him, "how often do you think I see my boy? What tides do you think he has with his home? He came up here after he'd got back from Antelope, but before that I'd only seen him once in six weeks."

"That's pretty hard," he commented, his elbow on the arm of the chair, his chin sunk in the cup of his up-curved hand. "That's pretty tough. I didn't know it was as bad as that."

"Nobody knows anything about him. He won't let them. He won't let me. He's proud, and trying to hide it all. That's the reason he comes up here so seldom. He knows I can see into him, see through him, clear through him, and he don't want me to see how miserable he is."

"Oh!" said the old man, moving slightly and raising his eyes to look at her. The interjection was full of significance, pregnant with understanding, appreciation and enlightenment. He was surprised himself. He had thought, and had understood from Dominick, that no one, especially no one of his own people, knew of the young man's domestic infelicities. Neither of them was shrewd enough to realize that the mother would guess, would know by instinct.

"And what do you suppose he came up for that once?" pursued Mrs. Ryan. "You could guess a lot of times but you'd never strike it. He came up here the night of my ball to ask me to give him an invitation for his wife."

As to Buying.

Whatever we wish to buy, we ought first to consider not only if the thing be fit for us, but if the manufacture of it be a wholesome and happy one; and if, on the whole, the sum we are going to spend will do as much good spent in this way as it would if spent in any other way.—Ruskin.

FLYING MEN FALL.

victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peckles, Henry, Tenn., proved. "Six bottles of Electric Bitters" he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help everybody. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it.
